

Jamie Hay

I'm a BAFTA award-winning documentary editor for The Nazis a Warning from History. My strengths are managing the mass of rushes and helping to find the story line through them, developing the characters and finding the humour in things.

I started my career at the BBC working on the science strand Horizon and history strand Timewatch, since then I have worked in all areas of factual, from helping first time directors on the Channel 4 series 4Real to observational series like Living on the Edge, where Chris Terrill explores the lives of Reindeer herders in the Artic circle, West African fishermen and desert nomads.

More recently I edited Broadmoor, the first programme ever made inside the infamous psychiatric hospital, The Last Dukes a documentary looking at the remaining 24 Dukes of England and Reinventing the Royals, Steve Hewlett's charting of the battle between the Royal family and the press,

1x45 The WAGS 100 mile Yomp Uppercut Films for BFBS. Twelve wives and girlfriends of serving Royal Marines try to walk the 100 mile South Downs Way in 36 hours. As they walk we learn about blisters, knees and what it is like to be a military wife, particularly when your husband is on the front line and they all live in dread of that knock on the door.	Chris Terrill	Nick Pollard
1x60 Return to the Jungle Uppercut Films for BFBS, 50 years after the event 3 old soldiers return to a hill in the middle of the Borneo jungle where they fought a long forgotten battle, in a long forgotten war. On that night 36 paratroopers held off 400 Indonesian Special Forces and turned the whole campaign. Today locals who were children then, still remember them, and they are received by the villagers as heroes.	Chris Terrill	Nick Pollard
